Community Investment

Great Hearts stands by the essential importance of a thorough immersion in Music for students. We believe that Music instruction is an education in beauty. Through their experiences of performing classic works of music and composing original ones, our students experience the discipline and humility that true creativity requires.

Please meet Ms. Claire Penneau in her own words –

“Developmentally, music meets the whole child: music is an aural art and children are aural learners, it evokes movement and fosters strong coordination and sense of proprioception, it is a creative and expressive art which allows children the ability to express emotions they do not yet have words for and it is a social art that encourages a strong sense of self and belonging. Most importantly, a strong and supported music education gives children the gift of community where inner experiences become shared creative experiences; children learn about themselves and others tapping into hidden courage to have a strong voice and presence as well as a strong listening ear and awareness of others.”

Headmaster's Corner

This week's tip to strengthen support for student success is to choose a family book or text that emphasizes gratitude. You read to your student or have your student read to you. Let me recommend George Washington's Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Reading together and asking your student to tell you what the reading means is a great way to support your student's growth as a reader. Learning how to read and becoming better and better at reading decoding and comprehension is one of our highest priorities at Archway Glendale.

Enjoy your Thanksgiving next week and keep in mind that an attitude of gratitude leads to beatitude!
